Higher education has a 'last mile' problem

Education in any form is struggling to address families and communities with economic and other readiness problems

Free or low-cost educational content does not easily solve readiness problems which have a multitude of causative factors

For-profit models rightfully struggle with 'last-mile' problems. Public policy matters!

In 1900, 0.25% went to college (1 in 400).
In 2009, 40% of 18-24 year-olds were enrolled in college,
70% of all high school graduates were enrolled in college
(Tyler Cowan & NY Times)

Those that have the social, economic, cognitive capabilities are in the higher education system

What would Abraham Lincoln think of a MOOC?

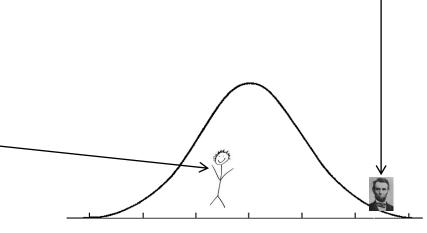

Abraham Lincoln

- Autodidactic
- Books, books, books
- Became a skilled military strategist
- Penchant for poetry, Shakespeare, politics and history

My nephew

- Not an autodidact
- Good worker, smart kid, but...
- It takes a village
- After a few low-security colleges and much money borrowed
- He has found an intellectual home

CONNECTING AMERICA: THE NATIONAL BROADBAND PLAN

The National Broadband Plan lays out a bold roadmap to America's future. These initiatives will stimulate economic growth, spur job creation, and boost our capabilities in education, healthcare, homeland security and more.

Explore the Plan below and learn more about how affordable, high-speed broadband access will help America lead in the 21st century.

Like electricity a century ago, broadband is a foundation for economic growth, job creation, global competitiveness and a better way of life. It is enabling entire new industries and unlocking vast new possibilities for existing ones. It is changing how we educate children, deliver health care, manage energy, ensure public safety, engage government, and access, organize and disseminate knowledge.
